National Intelligence Daily

Monday 8 January 1979

Sanitized Copy Approved for Release 2011/06/23: CIA-RDP81T00368R000100010003-4

25X1

r	Top Secret
Contents
Situation Reports
Iran		1
Vietnam-Kampuchea-China		3
Briefs and Comments
Italy: Decisive Test for Government		5
Rhodesia: ZANU Activities		6
Indonesia: Possible Fuel Price Incr	rease	7
Zaire: Prospects for Unrest		7
Special Analysis
Pakistan's Problems	· • • • •	8
Overnight Reports		11
i 25X1	Top Secret

_	_
٠,	-	Y	•

25X1

Top Secret

SITUATION REPORT: Iran
Prime Minister Bakhtiar has had littl securing moderate opposition support for himent, which does not include any opposition. More demonstrations denouncing Bakhtiar to Tehran and other cities yesterday.	is new govern n figures. ok place in 2	25 X 1
even the moderate wing of the Front, led by Mehdi Bazargan, will join Ay Khomeini and Front hardliners in opposing the moderates stil midated by Khomeini's hold on the masses. opposition leaders are willing to risk a m	e National 25 atollah 25 Bakhtiar. 1 feel inti- The hardline ilitary coup	5X1 5X1
against Bakhtiar's government in order to the Shah.	bring down 25	X 1
Bakhtiar's cabinet consists mostly of servants and respected professional men. echelon opposition figure who Bakhtiar had join the cabinet told US officials that he opposed to the new government, which he ch too little, too late. The source reiterat Shah must leave the country before the mod break with Khomeini.	One second- hoped would was totally aracterized as ed that the
Bakhtiar persuaded retired General Jaman Minister of War. Jam is likely to press to give him control over the day-to-day operamilitary.	he Shah to Bakhtiar left several cabinet positio and took the Interior Minister post himsel Minister of Foreign Affairs is Ahmad Mir-F former official in the Foreign Ministry wh in 1973 for allowing Soviet overflights to the Arabs during their war with Israel.	f. The new endereski, a to was fired	25X1 5X1 25X
the Sha cided to leave Iran "soon" for a "vacation now that Bakhtiar has formed a government.	and rest"	25 X 1 25 X 1

the Shah's close advisers, including

Top Secret

Sanitized Copy Ar	pproved for Release	2011/06/23: CIA	-RDP81T00368R000	100010003-4
	pp. 0 . 0 a . 0 0 . 0 a 0 0

Top	Secret

25X1

Ambassador to the US Zahedi, who had been urging the Shah to stay home, now believe it would be wise for him to go.

25X1

25X1

These advisers expect that, if Bakhtiar does not authorize force to repress the opposition, the military will step in and crack down on its own.

the military is very close to seizing power. In either case, Zahedi is said to believe the Shah should dissociate himself from the situation by leaving the country.

Zahedi has long urged the Shah to crack down on 25X1 the opposition. We believe that, if Zahedi and other hardliners in the court now favor the Shah's departure, their change probably reflects their frustration with his refusal to order a crackdown. We doubt that Zahedi expects Bakhtiar to implement the "iron fist" approach, and Zahedi probably prefers that the military do so. The Shah has still not set a departure date, and his public comments remain vague on his plans.

25X1

25X1

	_	_
٠.	)	ኅ	Х	1

Top Secret

SITUATION REPORT: Vietnam-Kampuchea-China

Following the capture of Phnom Penh, the Vietnamese now control the eastern third of Kampuchea. Prince Sihanouk left Phnom Penh on Saturday and has stopped in Beijing (Peking) on his way to New York, where he will present Kampuchea's case against Vietnam to the UN Security Council. Other Kampuchean leaders, includ-	X´
ing Foreign Minister Ieng Sary, saw Sihanouk off, but their current whereabouts are unknown.	1

Although some Kampuchean forces are still operating behind the Vietnamese columns, many Kampuchean main forces have disengaged and withdrawn after offering token resistance. We believe the Pol Pot regime hopes to marshal these units for a protracted guerrilla campaign against the Vietnamese. The regime will probably establish a "temporary" capital in western Kampuchea.

The Kampucheans appear to have a viable military force still intact, and they presumably have stockpiled sufficient weapons and supplies in the west to maintain those forces until new supply channels can be established.

The Thai Government has considered various contingency plans in the event of a Vietnamese takeover of Phnom Penh, but it is likely to adopt a cautious approach for the immediate future. Although the Thai have considered supporting a Khmer resistance force in western Kampuchea if a Vietnamese-controlled government is established in Phnom Penh, they are not likely to take any such action until the situation is clarified.

25X1

25X1

3

Top Secret	7
25	_ 5 X 1
The Thai have encouraged Chinese support of the Pol Pot regime, but their own involvement has been tempered by a reluctance to provoke Hanoi. During Deng Xiaoping's (Teng Hsiao-ping's) visit to Bangkok in November, the Thai agreed to let Chinese aircraft fly over Thailand en route to Kampuchea but were reluctant to allow overland transit of Chinese aid.	25 X 1
The Chinese are also continuing their military preparations along Vietnam's northern border. Since late December, China has substantially augmented its air, air defense, and ground forces opposite Vietnam.	25X1
Soviet media were prompt in covering the fall of Phnom Penh and lavish in their praise. The Soviet news agency TASS initially published a dispatch from Hanoi stating the Kampuchean insurgents' goals. Soon thereafter, prominent Soviet commentator Yury Kornilov said	· stating the Kampuchean insurgents' goals. Soon thereafter, prominent Soviet commentator Yury Kornilov said that there will be "deep satisfaction" throughout the world because the Pol Pot - Ieny Sary "clique" had resorted to genocide and was a tool of China's "expansionist policy." Radio Moscow's domestic service bluntly termed the development a "defeat" for China and complained that the Chinese are considering convoking the UN Security Council to discuss Vietnam's "mythical aggression."

25X1

25X1

25X1

Г	Top Secret
		25 X 1
BRIEFS AND COMMENTS
ITALY: Decisive Test for Government
Prime Minister Andreotti is schedule proposed economic stabilization plan for this week. Failure to resolve interparty over the plan could bring down the govern to Communist demands for direct participa one.	cabinet appr differences ment and lea tion in a ne	oval d
Two trends in particular have strain cohesiveness in recent months. Signs of vulnerabilitysuch as losses in local el growing discontent in the party's working have made many Christian Democrats more r grant new concessions to the Communists i their continued parliamentary support of Democratic government. At the same time, leadership has come under increasing inte to demonstrate that cooperation with the duces tangible benefits for party support	Communist ections and -class base- eluctant to n return for the Christia the Communi rnal pressur government p	- n st 25X1
The parliamentary debate on the econ shaping up as the decisive test for the A ment. Christian Democrats want the plan anti-inflation measures and are likely to Communist efforts to emphasize the creati Compromise will be complicated by major 1 negotiations scheduled to begin this mont	ndreotti gov to focus on resist expe on of more j abor contrac	ern- cted obs.
The absence of agreement on an altering formula is a strong incentive to flex sides, however, and there are signs that parties are growing more inclined to make Nevertheless, it will be difficult for poto dampen the crisis atmosphere that has If the Andreotti government does fall, progotiations centering on the question of Communist participation are likelynegoticuld lead to a stalemate and a new parlition.	ibility on b the major concessions litical lead developed. otracted increased iations that amentary ele	oth • ers
5	Top Secret	25X1

Top Secret
	25 X 1

RHODESIA: ZANU Activities

The Zimbabwe African National Union has infiltrated some 1,500 guerrillas into Rhodesia since early November. The Mozambican Army reportedly has agreed to provide them with more arms and may even allow some of its soldiers to join ZANU units infiltrating Rhodesia. ZANU leader Robert Mugabe appears to have strengthened his position as a result of the stepped-up operations and improved his relations with Mozambique.

Mozambican President Machel has long urged ZANU to intensify operations inside Rhodesia to ease the pressure of Rhodesian cross-border raids into Mozambique. He had been frustrated over ZANU's lack of success on the battlefield and the inability of Mozambican forces to resist the Rhodesian raids. Machel's more favorable impression of the guerrillas' progress in the fighting may have persuaded him to give them more support and made him more optimistic about ZANU's ultimate success in Rhodesia.

ZANU leaders apparently believe they are getting closer to assuming power in Rhodesia and are maneuvering for positions of influence in hopes of gaining top spots in a new Zimbabwe government. The ZANU leadership has been plagued by chronic personal and tribal rivalries. Mugabe may now be gaining more support within his organization because many Rhodesian blacks believe he would emerge as the eventual victor in Zimbabwe if a civil war broke out with Joshua Nkomo's Zimbabwe African People's Union. Machel's greater support for ZANU may also have strengthened Mugabe's hand.

25X1

25X1

Top	Secret
		25 X 1

INDONESIA: Possible Fuel Price Increase

Indonesian consumers, particularly in the opposition, will be watching President Suharto's annual budget message today for any reduction in the government's large subsidy on domestic petroleum products. The subsidy has become increasingly expensive and has encouraged excessive consumption, which has diverted crude oil that could have been exported. Indonesian Government economists reportedly have recommended that Suharto raise domestic fuel prices by 50 percent, but the issue is politically sensitive and past increases have touched off demonstrations.

ZAIRE: Prospects for Unrest

The potential for unrest in Zaire this year is high--largely because of economic and social grievances. According to the US Embassy, however, only a large-scale upheaval in Kinshasa would present an immediate threat to President Mobutu. The capital's population is becoming progressively impoverished, but the city remains relatively calm despite heightened tensions. Factors such as fear of a replay of the rampant civil disorders of the 1960s and the innate tolerance of many Zairians lessen the possibilities for upheaval.

25X1 25X1

SPECIAL ANALYSIS  PAKISTAN'S PROBLEMS  25X  President Zia-ul-Haq is faced with an accumulation of political and economic problems, some of which are fast coming to a head. The country's other senior generals may soon feel prompted to replace Zia, but a new military leader would probably not be much different. any event, the Pakistani military will probably be able at least in the short term, to prevent serious political deterioration.  Zia depends on the continued support of the military, and senior generals—as well as many other Pakistanis—are already unhappy with his performance. He will soon face a decision on former Prime Minister Bhutto that is almost certain to increase criticism of his rule.  The Supreme Court has completed its hearing of Bhutto's appeal of his conviction for a political murde and Zia's Attorney General expects it to announce its decision late this month. If the court upholds the dea sentence, as it is expected to do, Zia must then decide whether Bhutto is to be executed. The Attorney General believes Zia will order the death sentence carried out.  Some of Bhutto's followers believe his execution would bring such a strong popular reaction that Zia—an perhaps the military—would be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all-out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of ord
President Zia-ul-Haq is faced with an accumulation of political and economic problems, some of which are fast coming to a head. The country's other senior generals may soon feel prompted to replace Zia, but a new military leader would probably not be much different. any event, the Pakistani military will probably be able at least in the short term, to prevent serious politica deterioration.  Zia depends on the continued support of the military, and senior generals—as well as many other Pakistanis—are already unhappy with his performance. He will soon face a decision on former Prime Minister Bhutto that is almost certain to increase criticism of his rule.  The Supreme Court has completed its hearing of Bhutto's appeal of his conviction for a political murde and Zia's Attorney General expects it to announce its decision late this month. If the court upholds the dea sentence, as it is expected to do, Zia must then decide whether Bhutto is to be executed. The Attorney General believes Zia will order the death sentence carried out.  Some of Bhutto's followers believe his execution would bring such a strong popular reaction that Zia—an perhaps the military—would be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all-out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well s his resignation as necessary for the restoration of ord		Top Secret
President Zia-ul-Haq is faced with an accumulation of political and economic problems, some of which are fast coming to a head. The country's other senior generals may soon feel prompted to replace Zia, but a new military leader would probably not be much different. any event, the Pakistani military will probably be able at least in the short term, to prevent serious politica deterioration.  Zia depends on the continued support of the military, and senior generals—as well as many other Pakistanis—are already unhappy with his performance. He will soon face a decision on former Prime Minister Bhutto that is almost certain to increase criticism of his rule.  The Supreme Court has completed its hearing of Bhutto's appeal of his conviction for a political murde and Zia's Attorney General expects it to announce its decision late this month. If the court upholds the dea sentence, as it is expected to do, Zia must then decide whether Bhutto is to be executed. The Attorney General believes Zia will order the death sentence carried out.  Some of Bhutto's followers believe his execution would bring such a strong popular reaction that Zia—an perhaps the military—would be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all-out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well s his resignation as necessary for the restoration of ord
President Zia-ul-Haq is faced with an accumulation of political and economic problems, some of which are fast coming to a head. The country's other senior generals may soon feel prompted to replace Zia, but a new military leader would probably not be much different. any event, the Pakistani military will probably be able at least in the short term, to prevent serious political deterioration.  Zia depends on the continued support of the military, and senior generals—as well as many other Pakistanis—are already unhappy with his performance. He will soon face a decision on former Prime Minister Bhutto that is almost certain to increase criticism of his rule.  The Supreme Court has completed its hearing of Bhutto's appeal of his conviction for a political murde and Zia's Attorney General expects it to announce its decision late this month. If the court upholds the dea sentence, as it is expected to do, Zia must then decide whether Bhutto is to be executed. The Attorney General believes Zia will order the death sentence carried out.  Some of Bhutto's followers believe his execution would bring such a strong popular reaction that Zia—an perhaps the military—would be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all-out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order		25X <sup>2</sup>
President Zia-ul-Haq is faced with an accumulation of political and economic problems, some of which are fast coming to a head. The country's other senior generals may soon feel prompted to replace Zia, but a new military leader would probably not be much different. any event, the Pakistani military will probably be able at least in the short term, to prevent serious political deterioration.  Zia depends on the continued support of the military, and senior generals—as well as many other Pakistanis—are already unhappy with his performance. He will soon face a decision on former Prime Minister Bhutto that is almost certain to increase criticism of his rule.  The Supreme Court has completed its hearing of Bhutto's appeal of his conviction for a political murde and Zia's Attorney General expects it to announce its decision late this month. If the court upholds the deasentence, as it is expected to do, Zia must then decide whether Bhutto is to be executed. The Attorney General believes Zia will order the death sentence carried out.  Some of Bhutto's followers believe his execution would bring such a strong popular reaction that Zia—an perhaps the military—would be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all-out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order
President Zia-ul-Haq is faced with an accumulation of political and economic problems, some of which are fast coming to a head. The country's other senior generals may soon feel prompted to replace Zia, but a new military leader would probably not be much different. any event, the Pakistani military will probably be able at least in the short term, to prevent serious political deterioration.  Zia depends on the continued support of the military, and senior generals—as well as many other Pakistanis—are already unhappy with his performance. He will soon face a decision on former Prime Minister Bhutto that is almost certain to increase criticism of his rule.  The Supreme Court has completed its hearing of Bhutto's appeal of his conviction for a political murde and Zia's Attorney General expects it to announce its decision late this month. If the court upholds the dea sentence, as it is expected to do, Zia must then decide whether Bhutto is to be executed. The Attorney General believes Zia will order the death sentence carried out.  Some of Bhutto's followers believe his execution would bring such a strong popular reaction that Zia—an perhaps the military—would be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all—out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order	SPECIAL ANALYSIS
President Zia-ul-Haq is faced with an accumulation of political and economic problems, some of which are fast coming to a head. The country's other senior generals may soon feel prompted to replace Zia, but a new military leader would probably not be much different. any event, the Pakistani military will probably be able at least in the short term, to prevent serious political deterioration.  Zia depends on the continued support of the military, and senior generals—as well as many other Pakistanis—are already unhappy with his performance. He will soon face a decision on former Prime Minister Bhutto that is almost certain to increase criticism of his rule.  The Supreme Court has completed its hearing of Bhutto's appeal of his conviction for a political murde and Zia's Attorney General expects it to announce its decision late this month. If the court upholds the dea sentence, as it is expected to do, Zia must then decide whether Bhutto is to be executed. The Attorney General believes Zia will order the death sentence carried out.  Some of Bhutto's followers believe his execution would bring such a strong popular reaction that Zia—an perhaps the military—would be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all—out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order
President Zia-ul-Haq is faced with an accumulation of political and economic problems, some of which are fast coming to a head. The country's other senior generals may soon feel prompted to replace Zia, but a new military leader would probably not be much different. any event, the Pakistani military will probably be able at least in the short term, to prevent serious political deterioration.  Zia depends on the continued support of the military, and senior generals—as well as many other Pakistanis—are already unhappy with his performance. He will soon face a decision on former Prime Minister Bhutto that is almost certain to increase criticism of his rule.  The Supreme Court has completed its hearing of Bhutto's appeal of his conviction for a political murde and Zia's Attorney General expects it to announce its decision late this month. If the court upholds the dea sentence, as it is expected to do, Zia must then decide whether Bhutto is to be executed. The Attorney General believes Zia will order the death sentence carried out.  Some of Bhutto's followers believe his execution would bring such a strong popular reaction that Zia—an perhaps the military—would be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all—out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order	PAKISTAN'S PROBLEMS	051/4
of political and economic problems, some of which are fast coming to a head. The country's other senior generals may soon feel prompted to replace Zia, but a new military leader would probably not be much different. any event, the Pakistani military will probably be able at least in the short term, to prevent serious political deterioration.  Zia depends on the continued support of the military, and senior generals—as well as many other Pakistanis—are already unhappy with his performance. He will soon face a decision on former Prime Minister Bhutto that is almost certain to increase criticism of his rule.  The Supreme Court has completed its hearing of Bhutto's appeal of his conviction for a political murde and Zia's Attorney General expects it to announce its decision late this month. If the court upholds the dea sentence, as it is expected to do, Zia must then decide whether Bhutto is to be executed. The Attorney General believes Zia will order the death sentence carried out.  Some of Bhutto's followers believe his execution would bring such a strong popular reaction that Zia—an perhaps the military—would be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all—out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order		25 X 1
of political and economic problems, some of which are fast coming to a head. The country's other senior generals may soon feel prompted to replace Zia, but a new military leader would probably not be much different. any event, the Pakistani military will probably be able at least in the short term, to prevent serious political deterioration.  Zia depends on the continued support of the military, and senior generals—as well as many other Pakistanis—are already unhappy with his performance. He will soon face a decision on former Prime Minister Bhutto that is almost certain to increase criticism of his rule.  The Supreme Court has completed its hearing of Bhutto's appeal of his conviction for a political murde and Zia's Attorney General expects it to announce its decision late this month. If the court upholds the dea sentence, as it is expected to do, Zia must then decide whether Bhutto is to be executed. The Attorney General believes Zia will order the death sentence carried out.  Some of Bhutto's followers believe his execution would bring such a strong popular reaction that Zia—an perhaps the military—would be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all—out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order fast coming to a head. The country's other senior generals may soon feel prompted to replace Zia, but a new military leader would probably not be much different. any event, the Pakistani military will probably be able at least in the short term, to prevent serious political deterioration.  Zia depends on the continued support of the military, and senior generals—as well as many other Pakistanis—are already unhappy with his performance. He will soon face a decision on former Prime Minister Bhutto that is almost certain to increase criticism of his rule.  The Supreme Court has completed its hearing of Bhutto's appeal of his conviction for a political murde and Zia's Attorney General expects it to announce its decision late this month. If the court upholds the dea sentence, as it is expected to do, Zia must then decide whether Bhutto is to be executed. The Attorney General believes Zia will order the death sentence carried out.  Some of Bhutto's followers believe his execution would bring such a strong popular reaction that Zia—an perhaps the military—would be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all-out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order	President Zia-ul-Haq is faced a	with an accumulation willtary leader would probably not be much different.  any event, the Pakistani military will probably be able at least in the short term, to prevent serious politica deterioration.  Zia depends on the continued support of the mili- tary, and senior generals—as well as many other Paki- stanis—are already unhappy with his performance. He will soon face a decision on former Prime Minister Bhutto that is almost certain to increase criticism of his rule.  The Supreme Court has completed its hearing of Bhutto's appeal of his conviction for a political murde and Zia's Attorney General expects it to announce its decision late this month. If the court upholds the dea sentence, as it is expected to do, Zia must then decide whether Bhutto is to be executed. The Attorney General believes Zia will order the death sentence carried out.  Some of Bhutto's followers believe his execution would bring such a strong popular reaction that Zia—an perhaps the military—would be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all—out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well s his resignation as necessary for the restoration of order	fast coming to a head. The country	's other senior gen-
any event, the Pakistani military will probably be able at least in the short term, to prevent serious political deterioration.  Zia depends on the continued support of the military, and senior generals—as well as many other Pakistanis—are already unhappy with his performance. He will soon face a decision on former Prime Minister Bhutto that is almost certain to increase criticism of his rule.  The Supreme Court has completed its hearing of Bhutto's appeal of his conviction for a political murde and Zia's Attorney General expects it to announce its decision late this month. If the court upholds the dea sentence, as it is expected to do, Zia must then decide whether Bhutto is to be executed. The Attorney General believes Zia will order the death sentence carried out.  Some of Bhutto's followers believe his execution would bring such a strong popular reaction that Zia—an perhaps the military—would be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all—out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order.	erals may soon feel prompted to rep	lace Zia, but a new
Zia depends on the continued support of the military, and senior generals—as well as many other Pakistanis—are already unhappy with his performance. He will soon face a decision on former Prime Minister Bhutto that is almost certain to increase criticism of his rule.  The Supreme Court has completed its hearing of Bhutto's appeal of his conviction for a political murde and Zia's Attorney General expects it to announce its decision late this month. If the court upholds the dea sentence, as it is expected to do, Zia must then decide whether Bhutto is to be executed. The Attorney General believes Zia will order the death sentence carried out.  Some of Bhutto's followers believe his execution would bring such a strong popular reaction that Zia—an perhaps the military—would be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all—out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order	military leader would probably not	be much different.
Zia depends on the continued support of the military, and senior generals—as well as many other Pakistanis—are already unhappy with his performance. He will soon face a decision on former Prime Minister Bhutto that is almost certain to increase criticism of his rule.  The Supreme Court has completed its hearing of Bhutto's appeal of his conviction for a political murde and Zia's Attorney General expects it to announce its decision late this month. If the court upholds the dea sentence, as it is expected to do, Zia must then decide whether Bhutto is to be executed. The Attorney General believes Zia will order the death sentence carried out.  Some of Bhutto's followers believe his execution would bring such a strong popular reaction that Zia—an perhaps the military—would be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all—out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order	at least in the short term, to previous	ent serious politica
tary, and senior generals—as well as many other Pakistanis—are already unhappy with his performance. He will soon face a decision on former Prime Minister Bhutto that is almost certain to increase criticism of his rule.  The Supreme Court has completed its hearing of Bhutto's appeal of his conviction for a political murde and Zia's Attorney General expects it to announce its decision late this month. If the court upholds the dea sentence, as it is expected to do, Zia must then decide whether Bhutto is to be executed. The Attorney General believes Zia will order the death sentence carried out.  Some of Bhutto's followers believe his execution would bring such a strong popular reaction that Zia—an perhaps the military—would be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all—out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order	deterioration.	25
tary, and senior generals—as well as many other Pakistanis—are already unhappy with his performance. He will soon face a decision on former Prime Minister Bhutto that is almost certain to increase criticism of his rule.  The Supreme Court has completed its hearing of Bhutto's appeal of his conviction for a political murde and Zia's Attorney General expects it to announce its decision late this month. If the court upholds the dea sentence, as it is expected to do, Zia must then decide whether Bhutto is to be executed. The Attorney General believes Zia will order the death sentence carried out.  Some of Bhutto's followers believe his execution would bring such a strong popular reaction that Zia—an perhaps the military—would be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all—out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order	Zia depends on the continued s	upport of the milistanis—are already unhappy with his performance. He will soon face a decision on former Prime Minister Bhutto that is almost certain to increase criticism of his rule.  The Supreme Court has completed its hearing of Bhutto's appeal of his conviction for a political murde and Zia's Attorney General expects it to announce its decision late this month. If the court upholds the dea sentence, as it is expected to do, Zia must then decide whether Bhutto is to be executed. The Attorney General believes Zia will order the death sentence carried out.  Some of Bhutto's followers believe his execution would bring such a strong popular reaction that Zia—an perhaps the military—would be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all-out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order	tary, and senior generalsas well a	as many other Paki-
Bhutto that is almost certain to increase criticism of his rule.  The Supreme Court has completed its hearing of Bhutto's appeal of his conviction for a political murde and Zia's Attorney General expects it to announce its decision late this month. If the court upholds the dea sentence, as it is expected to do, Zia must then decide whether Bhutto is to be executed. The Attorney General believes Zia will order the death sentence carried out.  Some of Bhutto's followers believe his execution would bring such a strong popular reaction that Ziaan perhaps the militarywould be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all-out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order	stanisare already unhappy with his	s performance. He
The Supreme Court has completed its hearing of Bhutto's appeal of his conviction for a political murde and Zia's Attorney General expects it to announce its decision late this month. If the court upholds the dea sentence, as it is expected to do, Zia must then decide whether Bhutto is to be executed. The Attorney General believes Zia will order the death sentence carried out.  Some of Bhutto's followers believe his execution would bring such a strong popular reaction that Ziaan perhaps the militarywould be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all-out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order
Bhutto's appeal of his conviction for a political murde and Zia's Attorney General expects it to announce its decision late this month. If the court upholds the dea sentence, as it is expected to do, Zia must then decide whether Bhutto is to be executed. The Attorney General believes Zia will order the death sentence carried out.  Some of Bhutto's followers believe his execution would bring such a strong popular reaction that Ziaan perhaps the militarywould be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all-out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order	his rule.	25X
Bhutto's appeal of his conviction for a political murde and Zia's Attorney General expects it to announce its decision late this month. If the court upholds the dea sentence, as it is expected to do, Zia must then decide whether Bhutto is to be executed. The Attorney General believes Zia will order the death sentence carried out.  Some of Bhutto's followers believe his execution would bring such a strong popular reaction that Ziaan perhaps the militarywould be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all-out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order	The Current Court has semulate	a ira baahina se and Zia's Attorney General expects it to announce its decision late this month. If the court upholds the dea sentence, as it is expected to do, Zia must then decide whether Bhutto is to be executed. The Attorney General believes Zia will order the death sentence carried out.  Some of Bhutto's followers believe his execution would bring such a strong popular reaction that Ziaan perhaps the militarywould be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all-out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order	Bhutto's appeal of his conviction for	or a political murde sentence, as it is expected to do, Zia must then decide whether Bhutto is to be executed. The Attorney General believes Zia will order the death sentence carried out.  25X  Some of Bhutto's followers believe his execution would bring such a strong popular reaction that Ziaan perhaps the militarywould be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all-out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order	and Zia's Attorney General expects :	it to announce its whether Bhutto is to be executed. The Attorney General believes Zia will order the death sentence carried out.  25X  Some of Bhutto's followers believe his execution would bring such a strong popular reaction that Ziaan perhaps the militarywould be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all-out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order	decision late this month. If the co	ourt upholds the dea
Some of Bhutto's followers believe his execution would bring such a strong popular reaction that Ziaan perhaps the militarywould be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all-out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order	whether Bhutto is to be executed	The Attorney General
Some of Bhutto's followers believe his execution would bring such a strong popular reaction that Ziaan perhaps the militarywould be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all-out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order
would bring such a strong popular reaction that Ziaan perhaps the militarywould be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all-out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order		25X
would bring such a strong popular reaction that Ziaan perhaps the militarywould be driven from power. The government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all-out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order	Some of Bhutto's followers bel:	ieve his execution government has previously thwarted attempts by Bhutto's followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all-out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order	would bring such a strong popular re	eaction that Ziaand followers to stage widespread demonstrations, and his supporters have so far not made an all-out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order.	perhaps the militarywould be drive	en from power. The supporters have so far not made an all-out effort to create turmoil. Should Zia opt for execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order	followers to stage widespread demonstrated	attempts by Bhutto's spread rioting follow, his fellow generals might well shis resignation as necessary for the restoration of order his resignation as necessary for the restoration of ord	create turmoil. Should Zia opt for	execution, and wide spread rioting follow, his fellow go	enerals might well so
75X1	mis resignation as necessary for the	e restoration of orde 25 X 1

8

Top Secret

25X1
Zia could be removed from office, however, if he does not confirm the death sentence. Few Pakistanis are neutral about Bhutto, and manyincluding senior generalsfeel strongly that Bhutto must be executed to prevent his returning to power.  25X1
A Civilian Government
Zia also must decide what to do about growing pressures for a return to civilian government. Both the politicians and a number of senior military officers want Army control ended, and Zia's inability to achieve this so far is a major cause of the dissatisfaction with him. Zia is reluctant to turn over power until he can be sure that the government will be honest and stable and that Bhutto's followers will have a minimal role in it.  25X1 25X1
Zia hoped to build the Pakistan National Alliance a coalition of nine parties formed to oppose Bhuttointo a dominant political force. Bhutto, however, still has widespread popular support, and in a free election his party would probably win enough seats to make it at least an influential opposition party.  25X1
After prolonged negotiations, Zia has won the support of the Pakistan National Alliance but, in the process, the two best known figures in the Alliance withdrew their parties, a third smaller party also left, and the most important remaining party in the Alliance split, leaving Zia with the support of five small parties and a faction of a major party.  25X1
Zia has promised an election this year, but so far has not set a date. Unless he makes a firm commitment, the rift between Zia and the politiciansincluding those who now support himis likely to grow.  Economic Problems  25X1
TOOLOWIC LIONIEWS
Zia is reluctant to incur the political costs of forcing Pakistan's economy to operate within its means.  Last fall, he turned down a proposal of the International

Sanitized Copy Approved for Release 2011/06/23 : CIA-RDP81T00368R000100010003-4

	Ton Secret
29	25X1 25X1
Monetary Fund that would have provided a standby credit for balance of payments su change for financial support, Zia would he rising public spending, especially on lar subsidies for a wide range of consumer go	apport. In ex- have had to curb rge government
Pakistan's budget for this year show tures will increase sharply because of hi sidies and the government's decision to s of a steel mill in Karachi.	' 1
Any cutback in subsidies would boost for basic foodstuffs and thus encourage i cism of the government. Crop failures reimports of high-cost wheat this year and more important than ever.	increasing criti- equire large
Foreign Challenges
The troubles in Iran have increased isolation that has grown in Pakistan since when pro-Communist leaders seized power in the communist leaders seized power in the communist leaders.	ce last April,
Afghanistan.	25 X 1
The new Afghan Government has assure that it wants a peaceful settlement of the border dispute between the two countries. stanis see it, however, Afghanistan's ultitle annexation of Pakistan's two western number of public and private statements be new rulers tend to confirm Pakistani worr	ne longstanding  As the Paki- timate goal is provinces. A by Afghanistan's
The Pakistanis recognize that the Afis not now in a position to move against long-term threat posed by Afghan ambition to the general malaise in Pakistan as the leaders grapple with their political and lems.	Pakistan. The as, however, adds country's
	25X1
10	25X <sup>2</sup>
10	Top Secret

	Top Secret
OVERNIGHT REPORTS	25X1
(The items in the Overnight been coordinated within the They are prepared overnight Operations with analyst couthe production offices of I	e intelligence community.  t by the Office of Current  nment where possible from 25X1
Hungary
several consumer goods, independent for gasoline, effects are in line with previously or abolish many subsidies mext several years. Hungar Eastern Europe to begin per selected consumer goods and	y announced plans to reduce for consumer goods over the ry was the first country in riodically raising prices of has been able to do so with-pular backlash. Wage increases mentioned in the official a
Kampuchea-Vietnam-China	25X1
ports section), former Kamp took pains at a press confe	ing) today (see Situation Re- puchean leader Prince Sihanouk erence to dissociate himself of the Pol Pot regime, but he
11	Top Secret

Sanitized Copy Approved for Release 2011/06/23: CIA-RDP81T00368R000100010003-4

Top Secret
	25 X 1

said he would nonetheless proceed with his attempt to obtain UN condemnation of Vietnam's invasion. He claimed that all leaders of the regime are alive and are leading the resistance. Sihanouk contended that Chinese Vice Premier Deng Xiaoping (Teng Hsiao-ping) had promised yesterday to give Kampuchea "all types of aid" but had not said "anything precise" on the possibility of Chinese military intervention against Vietnam.

25X1

Sanitized Copy Approved for Release 2011/06/23 : CIA-RDP81T00
	25X1
마이트로 보고 있다. 이 이 사람들은 사람들은 사람들은 사람들은 사람들은 사람들은 사람들은 사람들은
마이트 등 전에 되었다. 그는 사람들은 사람들이 되었다. 그는 사람들이 되었다. 그는 사람들이 되었다. 그는 사람들이 되었다. 그는 사람들이 되었다.
는 이 마음이 있는 이 사람이 있는 것이 되고 있다면 있습니다. 그는 사람들은 사람들은 사람들은 사람들은 사람들은 사람들은 사람들은 사람들은
그 프로그 등이 같아. 그 나는 아는	